A Look at The Future of Surgery at Maine Medical Center

With the approval of the MaineHealth and Maine

Medical Center Boards of Trustees, MMC is moving forward with plans to build five state-of-the-art operating rooms on the Bean Building rooftop. With a price tag of $40 million, some people are asking, "Why now?" Maine Medical Center leadership believes the reasons are simple and clear:

- Surgery is important to the health of our community as they look to us to provide a local option for advanced procedures.
- We need ample space and modern technology to perform complex, life-saving interventions. It means something entirely different to be "plugged in" today than it did almost 30 years ago.

- Our current ORs are overbooked by industry standards. New spaces increase our flexibility to deliver on both scheduled and emergent procedures. Operating at a more sustainable pace will generate greater revenue for MMC.

Did You Know? WOW! Rebates is now WOW! Healthy Paybacks. You can get up to $50 back every six months for fitness/wellness activities, a CSA share, or health education classes. Go to mainehealth.org/healthypaybacks to get started.
